TYPES OF WORK

This refers to the nature of the work that you will be doing. For many legal areas, there are opportunities in a number of different practice settings.

Public Defense

Public defenders are attorneys appointed to represent people who are charged with crimes and who are unable to afford an attorney, pursuant to the 1963 Supreme Court ruling in Gideon v. Wainwright that defendants have a right to counsel in criminal cases. Following Gideon, states established or expanded public defender systems. These systems vary widely in structure, size, philosophy, approach, and quality. In addition to state-level, trial-level criminal defense, there are other types of public defense, including family, juvenile, capital, appellate, and federal defense.

Civil Legal Services

Civil legal services provide direct legal representation to individual clients who cannot afford attorneys. They focus on civil legal issues including housing, government benefits, family law, immigration law, employment, consumer protection and other areas affecting low-income populations. Some offices specialize in one area of the law or serve specific populations, while many provide a range of civil legal services to a wide range of individuals. These jobs require strong client interaction and advocacy skills. In addition to direct representation of individual clients, many civil legal services organizations also utilize strategies such as impact litigation, legislative advocacy, and community organizing.

Law Reform & Policy

Law reform work focuses on achieving systemic change on a particular issue through impact litigation or legislative advocacy. Instead of meeting the immediate legal needs of individual clients, law reform & policy work pursues large-scale reform that will affect many people. Law reform work can be found at the state, regional and national level. Most organizations that engage in this work exclusively focus on law reform, but there are some primarily direct services organizations that also have law reform practices, e.g., The Legal Aid Society's Law Reform Unit.

Government

Working for the government is a great way to engage with the community at large and to work in almost any practice area that excites you. Government lawyers can be litigators, work on policy matters that affect everything from the environment to civil rights, draft legislation and regulations, and engage in significant transactions that concern domestic or international issues. Government lawyers report high satisfaction with their work, take on significant responsibility early in their careers, develop excellent skills, and make a significant impact. In the challenging public interest job market, government offices are dependable sources of jobs, and many provide good compensation and great benefits.

Prosecution

Attorneys who choose to work in a prosecutor's office usually have a passion for criminal justice. Many are also eager to appear in court and try cases. Criminal justice reform and a commitment to preserving civil rights are topics that are at the forefront of discussions taking place in many prosecutors' offices around the country. If you want to be a prosecutor, you will be able to identify prosecutors' offices organized around the mission of achieving fairness and justice. Prosecutors are found at the local, state, and federal levels of government. State and local crimes are typically prosecuted by district attorneys' offices and/or the criminal division of state attorney generals' offices.

International Public Interest Law

International public interest work covers a wide range of topics, including: human rights, international criminal law, international environmental law, finance and development, international trade, law reform, refugees and migration, and corporate social responsibility. There is also a wide variety of types of employers whose work centers, or touches upon, international public interest law issues, including: large intergovernmental organizations (IGOs) like the UN and the World Bank, regional IGOs like the African Development Bank and the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, NGOs of every size in every country, and government jobs in the United States and abroad. Many attorneys move from one topic area to another, from the private to the public sector, and from domestic to international issues.

Private Public Interest Law Firms

Public interest law firms are for-profit businesses that work, at least in part, for underrepresented individuals or groups, or specialize in areas with a nexus to social justice. Some firms have a multitude of different practice areas, while others specialize in a single legal area. Public interest law firms come in all sizes, but are generally smaller than large corporate law firms.

WHAT MATTERS TO EMPLOYERS

Commitment & Experience: Different public interest fields prioritize different skillsets and experience, but one common overriding requirement is a passion for and demonstrated commitment to the work of the organization. Sometimes this is specific to the legal area – for example, a successful applicant to a voting rights position will need to have experience in voting rights. For others, it may be more general – for example, for a housing litigation position, while housing-specific experience is a plus, more important is strong client and advocacy skills and a commitment to working on behalf of low-income communities.

Law School Activities: Clinics are strongly recommended! All other law school activities can be beneficial, but better to excel and take a leadership role in a smaller number of activities than be less involved in many. Think about the skills/experience you need to round out your background, particularly in the context of the work that you are hoping to do. For example, if you have a background in client services but are interested in working in impact litigation, focus on experiences that will help to develop your research, writing and federal litigation experience. If you want to do direct services but have not had client work before, consider internships, clinics or student groups that work directly with clients.

Language Skills: It is not a requirement, but the ability to speak a language other than English can give you a big advantage in most direct services work. Spanish is the most needed, but French, Mandarin and other languages can be invaluable for groups who work in communities that speak those languages. Even the ability to engage in basic communication with your clients can be helpful. There are many options for learning or improving your language skills. You can take language classes through NYU and there are plenty of community classes and meetups in NYC. Several students have had good experiences connecting with affordable one-on-one language teachers through Zoom.

FINANCIAL CONSIDERATIONS

Finances can be a major concern when considering a public interest career. NYU encourages its graduates to pursue public service and wants to minimize the impact of debt on career choice, and provides a robust LRAP program to help graduates pursuing public interest careers repay the cost of their legal education. PILC strongly suggests that students meet with an LRAP counselor from the Office of Financial Services during their 1L or 2L year to discuss their individual situation as it relates to loans.

ROUGH TIMELINES FOR POST-GRADUATE PUBLIC INTEREST HIRING

For more detailed guidance, please review PILC's JD Public Interest Job Search Handbook or LLM Public Interest Job Search Handbook and other relevant handbooks (linked below and available at PILC's Career Resources page).

	Overview	Rising 3L summer	Fall 3L/LLM Year	Early Spring 3L/LLM	Late Spring 3L/LLM
Prosecution	Most prosecutor's offices post job openings on their own sites and do not use the Arizona Handbook. Hiring timelines vary significantly by region. See Prosecution Handbook for application and interview tips.	Most NE prosecutors' offices (NYC, Philly, Boston) open applications around July 15 or Aug 1.	NV and AZ generally open applications in the fall.	CA prosecutors' offices generally open in the winter or spring, and most offer post-bar Law Clerk roles and only accept actual ADA apps once a student has passed the Bar.
Law Reform &amp; Policy	Nearly all immediately post-grad hiring is through project or organizational fellowships. See Post-Graduate Fellowships section above. See JD Public Interest Post-Graduate Handbook for more information.	Some fellowships have summer deadlines.	Most annual (usually named) fellowships have application deadlines in the fall.	Some annual fellowships have early spring deadlines. There may be some limited ad-hoc fellowships.	There may be some ad-hoc fellowships posted in the late spring.
Public Interest Private Law Firms	Few public interest firms hire right out of law school. Those that do hire through firm-sponsored fellowships or on an ad-hoc basis, for the most part. A very small handful hires associates from their summer associate pool.	Some firm-sponsored fellowship deadlines are in August.	One public interest private law firm interviews for a post-graduate fellowship through Fall OCI. Many firm-sponsored fellowships have fall deadlines.	Some firm-sponsored fellowships have early spring deadlines.	There may be very limited ad-hoc hiring in late spring, based on need.
International	Most international post-grad positions are through fellowships, with deadlines throughout the year. Contract work and volunteering are also common ways to break into the field.  See International Public Interest Handbook for a select list of job search websites (appendix 2) and international fellowships (appendices 4 &amp; 5), and application/interview tips.	There may be limited fellowships that have summer deadlines.	Some international fellowships have early fall deadlines.  NYU-specific Fellowships: Masiywa-Bernstein Fellowship Program Human Rights in China Fellowship  For LLMs only: International Finance and Development Fellowship	Many international fellowships have early spring deadlines.  International Fellowships: Arthur Helton Global Human Rights Fellowship (Due Feb); the International Court of Justice Judicial Fellow Programme (Due Jan); and the LLM Public Interest Fellowship (Due March).	There may be some fellowships posted in the late spring.  Students should begin to apply to open, non-fellowship positions around March.
